

About

Welcome to Focus with Flare—a space where product photography meets perspective. I'm a commercial photographer who spends my days capturing clean, confident imagery for e-commerce brands. Here, I step away from the studio lights and white backgrounds to explore photography more freely—sharing techniques, behind-the-scenes insights, and the creative side of what makes a great image work.

This blog is where I document what I'm learning, experimenting with, and thinking about in the world of photography. Whether you're shooting products, portraits, or anything in between, I hope you'll find something here that sparks your own creative flair.

